"EARTH EPOCHS OVERVIEW"

CHAPTER REVIEW

Notes from John Jensen

Lloyd Pye had agreed to co-author this and the following three books in the Earth Epoch series. His untimely passing in Dec. 2013 left only the Introduction and Ocean Rise chapters complete. I have continued with the writing, though it is less dynamic, articulate and cohesive than Lloyd's writing skills. Though we disagreed on some points, he was the best collaborator any person could have. A good friend. RIP Lloyd.

I just want you to have as clear as possible picture of what I am trying to accomplish in the book. First it is important to make two points that the entire collection of my works rests on. One, I have no formal education past the 8th grade, although I have attended and audited some degree level classes in a couple of Universities. Most of my education is self-taught, and with the availability of the open internet over the last 20 years, I am about as well read as could be expected for a novice.

Secondly, I make absolutely no claim to attack nor defend, support or debunk either side of the Evolution- Young Earth Creation argument.

Sample from Earth Epochs

I do not advocate for any 'agenda', whether that agenda is academic, religious or scientific. To ensure there is no miscommunication about my personal perspective; I am an avowed 'Short Period Catastrophist', expecting to prove via catastrophic ocean rise, the geologic column, deep core drills, ice core samples, varve layers and other readings, that the Earth experiences major and cataclysmic catastrophes including dipole exchange on an irregular short term basis. The geologic column shows the average static or calm periods that are between catastrophes to average about 7,000 years. Many periods are much shorter, some are longer, and a very few are quite long.

With the discoveries of the sunken offshore Florida Harbors, I knew without any doubt that I could and would prove a civilization in North America just prior to 7000 years ago, and with that proof, I would have the foundation for proving the last great cataclysm of 7000 YBP. (Years Before Present) The last piece is proving how and why cataclysms return on such a frequent, though not precise schedule.

Sample from Earth Epochs

The above statement is proven by the many core drills taken by geologists, hunting for natural resources. The deepest core drills taken in general terms are about 50,000 feet into the earth's mantle.

Those core drills collectively show strata that changes from limestone (ocean floor) to sandstone (land erosion buildup) to shale (Shallow sea), and hard rock (granites, etc.) then back again. Most levels are between 2' and 14' thick, or roughly 1,000 to 7,000 years in age duration. Proof of strata change on a repeating short cycle basis is called the 'geologic column' and it is as fascinating as any information I have ever looked at, because it demonstrates, without question, how dynamic, volcanic and catastrophic our planet is.

The reason we know for certain that super mega cataclysms accompany every change, is that each stratum of the geologic column mostly does not have a transition layer, but changes from an ocean bed (limestone) to some other non-ocean surface, then back to limestone then back to something else on a clean non-transition basis.

Sample from Earth Epochs

In addition, magnetic polarity in rocks and geological strata demonstrates pole shifts have caused the poles to be located at many different places on the surface of the Earth at different times

The earth's surface as a whole is very dynamic, and most of the visible changes that we see are much more recent than most anyone understands. This is the time period ranging from the last 150,000 to possibly 180,000 years ago, and even that period is problematical. Other changes that reach back into the mists of the far distant past are buried deep in the geologic column, certainly much deeper than the few feet covering many fossilized and non-fossilized dinosaur bones.

The Andes and Rockies are NOT old, not even like a little bit, as structures like Puma Punku so readily show. The last three levels of civilization are readily apparent to anyone who can read the base blocks, intermediate and top stones of the South American Andes ancient ruins.

Sample from Earth Epochs

The same is true about every set of megaliths in the world from Baalbek, to Jerusalem, to the Giza Plateau to South America. The bottom stones are the best cut and dressed and also the largest. The second layer of stones are smaller and less well cut and dressed, and the top layer is generally rough stone to field stone in structure and design.

I have hard evidence that shows the Giza Plateau has been inundated (underwater) at least twice, if not more, since the Plateau and the Great Pyramid were built. I am not a pyramid expert, but I am a very good analytic oceanographers, (more accurately a seaman-commercial fisherman) and when I see moving salt water effects in any beach or land environment, I can basically identify that as a once ocean based location.

A big piece of the evidence structure is the Valley of the Whales, about 82 miles from the Giza Plateau Tufoni pitting, below is a result of seawater tidal action on limestone.

There is also recorded documentation of the Caliph of Cairo's lead engineer when dismantling the limestone casing of the GP in the 13th century, made a record of a salt encrustation layer (tidal shoulder) at about 254' height around the exterior.

When first entered in modern times, the Queens chamber had a 'very thick' salt encrustation line inside the chamber, showing without doubt, that the pyramid had been inundated to that level for some serious period of time. (Many thousands of years) That salt line, though well-known and documented, has been cleaned out to a great degree, because I suspect it is an embarrassment to Egyptology.

Giants in the Historical Record

I will be able to prove in this book that many mid-sized dinosaurs lived up into the mid Holocene about 7000 years ago, while small pockets of declining size species survived well up into the modern age. I will present a book full of images, pictographs, pottery, carvings, etc.

Sample from Earth Epochs

I will prove that hominids of great stature (over 15' tall) lived well into the Holocene start, and some mid-sized giants (about 12-18' lived well into the mid Holocene, while smaller giants up to about 10' lived up into relatively modern time. There were greater sized hominins (up to 36' tall) and some extraordinary large dinosaurs in some previous Epoch when ambient so-called 'gravity' was much less dense than it currently is.

Dinosaurs in Modern Times

I will also present articles on recent DNA tests on soft tissue and hemoglobin elements from more than 60 non-fossilized dinosaur bones, some still frozen in place in the great permafrost deepfreeze of the Northern Arctic Polar Regions.

Supporting that fact, I will prove that Gravity as a fixed law does not exist, and what we perceive as the 'G' force is actually the 'charge density' of an Electrostatic Field Force.

Sample from Earth Epochs

Such proofs are defined specifically for Earth's biosphere, and I am not going to extend the idea into Galactic or Universal application. That study is for others to discuss who are more qualified than me in Sub Quantum Kinetics.

I will show that during several of the Ice Melt Pulses, (Ocean Rise) the ambient temperature rose to a level that was at the limits of sustaining human and domestic animal life, and as a result, populations went underground to survive the incredible heat index. They built complex cities and great distance tunnel systems on most of the major continents of the world.

Last, I am not a commercial or consumer based writer. I write like I talk, so this entire book is first and foremost, a dialogue between you and me.

'Aliens" and 'Extraterrestrials' - a different view

Throughout recorded history, and in our ancient past there are witnessed, photographed, documented or bone fragment-fossil remains from at least 23 distinctly different hominid-hominin body types. There also exist thousands of drawings, paintings, cave art, artifacts, weavings, figurines, frescoes and pottery depicting so-called 'astronaut' images and some form of 'saucer like' or other aerial or 'flying' craft.

Myths and legends abound from nearly all cultures around the world of 'visitors' that arrived 'from the sky' in some kind of aerial vehicle-craft, where they then proceeded to develop and teach agriculture, water management and other civilizing technologies to the locals, following which they abruptly departed in their 'aerial' vehicles, promising to return at some future or later date.

In the 1950's, Immanuel Velikovsky, Charles Hapgood, and others began to propose a chaotic, cataclysmic Earth, with short duration stable periods, followed by Near Extinction Level (ELE) catastrophic events which 'wiped out' or nearly destroyed the biological envelope of the earth. Shortly after that period, Zachariah Sitchin and Erich von Däniken grouped some of the various theories into an "Ancient Astronaut" theory.

Sample from Earth Epochs

In the last several years, certain protagonists, and particularly Von Däniken's hirsute assistant, Giorgio A. Tsoukalos have developed a collected hypothesis based on much of the above artifacts and associated myths and legends that meld the sightings, representations and artifacts depicting 'crafts' and 'occupants' into a polyglot 'ANCIENT ALIEN' theory. In addition, super-imposed over the "Alien" theory is an enormous umbrella 'conspiracy theory' that the Government "knows all about it, and is in fact "covering everything up.

What makes the 'Ancient Alien theory so scary, is that like any faith based 'religion', it is predicated on a stunning lack of evidence (hard artifacts) of either hominin or craft, let alone the first shred of proof of exactly where in the Galaxy, Universe or Multi-Verse these so-called 'Aliens' came from.

Whatever, or whoever "They" are, like every other species on Earth, "They" are more likely rather than less likely to be part of the fabric of all carbon based life forms indigenous to this planet.

Sample from Earth Epochs

Because, from what we know currently, the Starchild skull and the elongated skulls are more likely, rather than less likely to share some part of their DNA with other hominids and other carbon based life forms on the planet.

That makes it very likely "They" are FROM this planet, and not from somewhere else out there in the Galaxy or Universe. Every single piece of information associated with "Their" various body types can be explained in terms of being an Original Terrestrial life form, easier than saying "They" are from somewhere 'out there'. Please note that I never allude to the fact that 'they' might have gone out there somewhere, and then returned here to Earth (their home planet), or that some may still be "out there". All those scenarios are possible, but not necessarily probable. Previous populations on this planet of all kinds of families of carbon based life forms have produced divergent and splendid panoply of variation in their family lineage during particular short, shorter and longer 'Epochs'. (Or periods between 'catastrophes').

Sample from Earth Epochs

The point was, and is....that some Earth based hominin group in one of the Epochs in the not so distant past had the capabilities of space travel. At least historical references seems to attest to that as a fact, as well as very clear reference to space travel in the Book of Enoch, The Sanskrit Epics, (Mahabharata and Ramayana) and the many other depictions of craft and occupants throughout history also attest to that fact. Because those 'testaments' exist, does not mean necessarily that either the craft or occupants are originally "FROM" out there somewhere else in the galaxy or universe. It was and is much more realistic to refer to unknown 'Other Terrestrials' as 'Ancient Astronauts' than it is to call them "Aliens" or "Extraterrestrials".

"They" have significant DNA matches to other living organisms on Earth, which logically means "They" are more likely to be FROM here, than they are to be FROM somewhere 'out there'. If there were a single piece of hard evidence of any kind, that could ONLY have come from some other environment than our Solar System and/or Earth, then I might listen to an argument that accounted for that particular piece of evidence, and then I would still argue that it is just as likely that the OT's (Other Terrestrials) traveled OUT to that location, got the artifact and then returned.

This Earth is just as likely to be their home base, with bases on the Moon, and Mars as any other scenario. The idea that 'They' had more time to evolve somewhere out there in space doesn't meet the facts of our own growth as a civilization. Where is any proof of how long it takes a cultural group to attain space flight? We are the only example there is, (that we know about) and we went from burning people at the stake for their religious beliefs, to putting men on the Moon and then bringing them back safely is something around 250 years. It just didn't take us very long to go from making fire with a couple of sticks to listening to Peter Jennings on the Evening News.

Sample from Earth Epochs

"Why" any other Hominin group or culture couldn't do it is just rhetoric. It is a proven fact that it can be done, (because WE have done it, so it is more likely, rather than less likely that BECAUSE it has been done in our recent past it most certainly could have been done in some pre-cataclysmic ancient past.

The deepest natural resource (oil exploration) core drills go down about 55,000 feet. They all demonstrate layers that have random and often alternate patterns of material. Sandstone for several feet, then slate, or limestone, then sandstone, then silicate, then sandstone, then limestone, etc. Most layers average about 14 foot deep, or geologically speaking, give or take, about 7,000 years.

One is nearly 250 foot deep (red sandstone) representing nearly 120,000 years, though many are 2-5 feet deep. For the global surface to change from limestone (ocean bottom) to sandstone (Land) requires a catastrophic event that often was probably very close to an extinction level event. A good example is the Mt. Tubo event about 72,000 years ago. Molecular Biologists agree that the Human Genome Pool was narrowed down to about 5,000 breeding pairs of Homo sapiens at that time. What that evidence suggests is that every hominin culture that has grown into a full civilization has done so in one of the periods between cataclysms. And like us, in a fairly short period of time.

If one of those cultures obtained interstellar space flight, as we are on the edge of doing, putting contingents of the culture into space to avoid a coming catastrophic event is not only logical but almost certainly true. Once living off planet for any length of time, one to two thousand years, their morphology would change to something different (in a weightless environment), and if the catastrophic event changed the electrostatic field of earth enough that it caused super giant plant and land animals to go extinct, then the OT's probably stayed out there (Moon, Mars or other space Base) for a very long time after the deluge.

And they probably haven't completely adjusted to the current electrostatic field density (the current construct of 'gravity') on this, their home planet.

And last, the OT's do in fact share some DNA with other carbon based life forms on Earth. We have good DNA samples from both the Starchild and the Elongated Skulls. They both share some common DNA with other hominids as well as most other life forms. Note I said some. I am not advocating they are any closer to 'Human' than they are to a sea cucumber. They share some of the same DNA. That is what makes them more likely, rather than less likely to be part of the biological fabric of this planet.

Sample from Earth Epochs

Hominids are a very tiny percent of the carbon based life forms on earth. The OT's (based on the Starchild and Paracas Skulls DNA) share a significant portion of their DNA with ALL other life forms on this planet, which means it is more likely, rather than less likely that 'they' are an intrinsic part of the fabric of that biology. It is much more 'fantastical' to postulate "They" came from somewhere far-far away to Earth just to find they are a near perfect match to terrestrial DNA", than it is to recognize "They" are much more likely to be an intrinsic part of the fabric of carbon based life forms of this planet, than any other postulate.

To clarify my thoughts on the machine code nature of terrestrial DNA; There are two parts to DNA. One is what used to be termed 'junk' DNA which is understood as NOT having strings of 'active' or 'functioning' code, which now are understood as possibly being the 'instruction set', that when activated, defines the 'blueprint design' of the 'replicate shell' or body, or chromosome structure) and produces (outputs) the code as a physical form, The DNA of that body contains the 'instructions' to replicate itself in its original environment, and that is the DNA that we can copy, duplicate, 'read' and analyze. The DNA at that level is environmentally specific, and so would vary widely from one biological environment to another. (As it does here on Earth).

The master instruction set (to build or blueprint the specific chromosomes design) would be universal, but the result would be specific to a particular environment. So, if that scenario is true, I see no logical reason to assume any replicant carbon based life form (body) from any other system in the Galaxy or Universe to have any similarities at all to those from our planet.

Only by some astronomically rare set of circumstances would the two even be remotely related. The only scenario I could even imagine is if the x-planet was "exactly" like Earth in all aspects, meaning Lithosphere, Biosphere, Density, G force, etc. Any change in 'G' force, with a change in the chemistry would radically alter life forms in ways we can hardly imagine.

There is a distinct relationship between all carbon based life form's DNA on this planet, where the similarities in both design and structure as well as what appears to be identical strings of DNA suggest a direct link between humans, hominids, hominins and the entire panoply of flora and fauna, both past and present.

We share somewhere around 97% of our DNA with Chimpanzees, 94% with great apes, and well over 50% with a sea cucumber. We share less with the DNA of the Starchild. But that is for another argument. Why 'interventionists' insist of calling hominins 'extraterrestrial' when every sighting every recorded shows creatures and their craft as being 'here' (on Earth, the Moon and probably Mars) That could, or might make them 'Other Terrestrials'. They are here as evidenced by tens of thousands of eye witnesses, tens of thousands of photographs, drawings, depictions, representations of craft and occupants. The "Other Terrestrials" or "OT's" have 5-6 generally different body or exoskeleton shapes and sizes, they travel in craft that have 3-4 general shapes, and exhibit 3-4 specific non-gravitational characteristics including various degrees of transparency, including instantaneous visibility and invisibility. Craft also travel at incredible speeds, make right angle or reverse direction hi speed turns and appear and disappear on radar and other tracking devices instantaneously.

To speculate on where "They" are from is as meaningless as attributing any "purpose or meaning" to their observed behavior. At best we can document and categorize what is observed. The preponderance of evidence will eventually lead to some general conclusions, the most obvious being that craft behavior suggests some form of anti-gravity control, likely to be artifacts of an electrostatic field 'envelope', (actually, Los Alamos NL Scientists know that to a degree of near certainty).

The above demonstrates that observed phenomenon of "Other Terrestrials" are in fact elements of actual dimensional craft and occupants, that they have been here as long as recorded history exists, and likely far into the pre-historic past. That, however does NOT support that "They" are "Extraterrestrial" or from somewhere else in the galaxy or universe. Without speculation or guesswork, "They" are "Other" and/or possibly "Unknown" terrestrials. The odds are astronomical against a biological envelope existing out there on some other planet in this or some other Galaxy, that matches exactly our environment, and THEN that environment producing a near identical body replicant of an Earth Hominid with DNA that matches ours, at least close enough to hybridize both. It is completely outside my realm of reference to even contemplate. Not only do I not think it happened, I don't even think it possible.
