OVERVIEW TO CHAPTERS

Seven years ago, while tooling around on early Google Earth, I found some underwater channels and canals in New York's Long Island Sound that didn't seem to have any connection to current land based use. Many of them started nowhere, and went nowhere, and their only connection was to underwater 'harbors'. Following that, I went on a journey of exploration finding remnants of an old canal system all over the Eastern Atlantic Coast, and on down into Mexico. Within a year, I knew I had a very large piece of data on my hands that had not been looked at by anyone before. Some of those canals have since been proven to be modern and others from different periods of time. About two years ago I discovered the Florida off shore harbors, and that was the catalyst to write the book, as I now had 'proof' of a civilization from before a time when the Ocean Levels were 8' to 12' lower than they are today.

The basis of my work is supported by the record of ocean rise across the Holocene. Because the start and stop periods of ocean rise were nearly instantaneous, it became clear that major cataclysms occurred as trigger mechanisms for the events. That's why I began to look for geological evidence and support to prove that the start and stop periods were a 'result' of some catastrophic event.

The Earth Axis Tilt

I quickly understood that the canal and channel systems on the East Coast were from two completely different time periods. Some of the canals were built at a time when the tidal level was relatively close to what they are today. That led me into studying Ocean Rise over the Holocene to determine at what point Ocean Levels stabilized to within 1' of their current position. After much study, that specific date appeared to be about 5,000 years ago for the Jamaica Plain levels (near Florida test sites) So we had a period of high technology building very sophisticated canals sometime before 7 kya, and a derivative or survivor culture using some similar but degraded techniques 3.5 thousand years later.

The thorough and complete study of Ocean Rise over the Holocene led me to some very exciting discoveries of global cataclysm 'like' events that clustered around the same specific dates.

Sample from Earth Epochs

The first identifiable date was centered on the date of Joshua's 'Long Day' of 1,448 BC, or 3,463 ybp. Many worldwide events coincide almost perfectly to that time. Besides the 'Sun Standing Still' during Joshua's Long Day, and stories about the same event around the world, other concurrent events include the regression dated breach of Gibraltar Strait; the explosion (eruption) of Santorini (Thera) in the Mediterranean, and the Tsunami debris fields left around the Atlantic Rim.

That event destroyed an emerging survivor culture from the earlier 7K disaster, and civilization did not start again for many cultures for about 1,000 years after that 3.5 kya cataclysm. Following that latest event, Mound Builders from both the Mississippi Delta and South Florida embarked on a canoe flotilla moving all their peoples and technologies to Vera Cruz, Mexico about 3,400 years ago, to become the precursors to the early Olmec's and Toltec's and later the Maya culture.

One of the other features of the 3.5 kya cataclysm is the Earth rolled on its axis about 23.5 degrees and changed its solar orbit just enough to cause all cultures world-wide to recalibrate their calendars from a 360 day solar year to adding 5.25 days (called 'dead-days') to their calendars. The Maya maintained 3 separate calendars, some cultures in Asia used the new calendar and some maintained the old one. Stonehenge and other major calendar clocks were built to measure, and consequently predict the new 5 day longer solar cycle.

Ancient Canal Builders

There are many underwater harbors, channels and canals on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts that are covered with vestiges and remnants of a sophisticated and large culture or civilization that existed BEFORE current sea level rose an average of 5' 5". Evidence on this site, shows many harbor areas on much of New York's Long Island Sound and other East Coast locations, Florida Gulf Coast and Mexico, as well as a giant array in South Africa to have been 'worked' and 'inhabited' by a very large, and technically sophisticated population of canal builders during some remote period.

Florida, New York, Central Mexico and Africa have extensive offshore harbor and/or canal-channel systems that are at least 7,000 years old. The South Africa system is so gigantic it can be seen from the International Space Station. This one particular system is not on an existing shoreline, but is fed from the mountains to its Eastern side. The shore side network of canals and channels are mostly deteriorating into and under the existing water table, suggesting a very large, sophisticated, technically advanced culture built them.

In addition, we were able to ascertain that a majority of the Intracoastal Waterway is in fact an ancient system, and only parts of it have been taken over and re-dredged for modern use. Proof of this concept is the 70 mile long system of channels and canals in Long Island Sound, NY and the sunken offshore harbors in Florida. Many of these canals are more than 300' in width, many miles in length, and are sunken and degraded into the water table. Extensions of the ancient system exist as far as 400 miles into Central Mexico.

Sample from Earth Epochs

The Ancient Canal Builders were a highly complex and technically advanced civilization that lived on the Atlantic and Gulf Coast of North America, prior to 7,000 years ago. Spread out over an area from Long Island Sound, New Jersey, Chesapeake Bay, North Carolina, Florida, Mexico, and including SW Africa, evidence of their existence and enormous size and range of their capabilities suggests they represent an extensive population with some very sophisticated technology.

Remnant channels and canals are very sophisticated construction projects, demonstrating a balance of engineering and construction capabilities that rival modern technologies. Ancient Canal Builders created and used several types of canal systems, but are most easily identified by their sunken offshore harbors and connecting canals. The Ancient Canal Builders were a seafaring or ocean-based complex society with natural resources, transportation, agriculture and aquaculture as their internal and external or Atlantic based trade system.

The Last Great Cataclysm – 7,000 Years Ago

Prior to the Axis Tilt (going backward in time), The Last Great Cataclysm occurred almost exactly 7,000 years ago. It was a category 5 mega cataclysm that had a global impact, destroying all vestiges of life that existed at that time. Some of the geological events that are dated to this exact time period are;

- The Breach of the Bosphorus Strait
- The Storegga Underwater Landslide
- Sinking of Doggerland
- Coastal Tsunami debris fields 6-8 meters high world wide
- Regression Birth of Niagara Falls
- Regression Birth of Minnesota Falls
- The draining of the great Laurentide Lake 'Agassiz'
- The Windover Bog People

The early Windover Bog – Ancient Canal Builder civilization was European and not Amerindian, as evidenced by the colony burial site at Windover Bog, FL dated to -8,300 to 7,400 YBP. The pre catastrophic civilizations probably developed as "aquacultures" and major canal builders due to the rapid rise of sea level following the 'Melt Surge' of the post glacial, early Holocene period. Sea level was rising on average at a rate of more than 5' per 100 years, causing land based populations living, as we do today, primarily on the coasts, to be very unstable. It is probable that the Builders of the Bimini Harbor Wall were directly related to the Windover Bog People, as well as the Michigan Copper Miners.

The Ice Melt Purge prior to 7 KYA was raising Ocean Levels about 5' every hundred years, and had been doing so for some 4,000 years. That rapid raise in Ocean Level could only have existed with a higher heat index than is currently normal. Some have predicted as much as 14 -27 degrees increase in ambient temperature. To achieve that heat index, the Earth probably moved closer to the Sun, or the Sun went through a period of intense heat increase through Solar flares, etc. In either case, the heat increase stopped 7 kya, returning the planet to a stable climate environment. The length of the Solar Year prior to the Last Great Cataclysm according to Zep Tepe records was a calendar of 288 days. From 7 kya to 3,460 ybp, the calendar was exactly 360 days, then at 1,448 BC it increased to 365.25 days. It is highly likely that before 7 kya the Earth's axis of spin was exactly 90 degrees from the celestial equator and it was equal to the orbit of the ecliptic. Without an axis tilt, there were no seasons, and not near the need for a specific solar calendar system.

Giants in the Historical Record

Over the last period of recorded history, from about 6,400 years ago with Sumerian documents, down through the post Columbian period, giant sized hominids are a distinct part of that data and information. At the earliest point in recorded history, the giants that were acknowledged by Sumerian records to have existed "before the flood" (7,000 years ago) were referred to as "Nephilim", and were attributed to being "Sons of the Gods", and to be very large, (from 16' to 28' tall) to be very intelligent, very strong and were extremely long lived. Following the Flood, the giants degenerated in size down to 12' to 14' tall by the time of Moses and Joshua's return to Canaan from Egypt. (Og of Bashan had a 'bedstead of iron 14' in length, meaning that he was about 13' tall).

400 years later, Goliath and his brothers were about 10' tall, or slightly smaller. By the time of post Columbian exploration, live South American giants of about the same stature (9' to 9.5') were discovered in Patagonia by Magellan's crew. Across the world other giants of various sizes have been found in all kinds of grave and funeral conditions that roughly equate to the above timeline for the declining size of giants since the great Flood.

The city of Bashan was re-discovered in the late 1800's, and had megalithic stone houses lining its wide stone streets, which had 12' high ceilings, very large rooms and furniture as well as 10' stone doorways.

We know from Biblical records this city was sacked and burnt during Joshua's purge of the giants around 1,450 BC. Bashan is in the Beqaa Valley, near Mt Hermon, the ancestral home of the giants before the great Flood, and a major religious center long before King David moved that center to Jerusalem.

The specifics regarding the lineage of giants from the Nephilim before the great Flood, through the later tribes of giants including the Rapha and Rephaites, the Horites and the Anakites indicate that surviving pockets of survivors declined in size, greatly reduced their long lived status, and lost their ability to communicate telepathically with other hominids (and also with animals).

Sample from Earth Epochs

It is more likely, rather than less likely that giants worked and moved the megalithic stones that weigh upward of 1,200 tons that are the trilithon base of the Temple at Baalbek, as well as those in the foundation of the Temple of David in Jerusalem.

There is a wealth of data and information chronicling the Archaeological finds of thousands of giants in graves and funeral conditions all over the world.

Dinosaurs in the Historical Record

Every piece of evidence collected, suggest some Dinosaurs are contemporaneous with modern humans sometime in our recent Epoch past. There are hundreds of drawing, paintings and chipped stone images of dinosaur like creatures all over the world.

Stone carvings include a Stegosaurus like creature in a Temple column in Cambodia, as well as figures carved into grave stones in the Ica district of Peru and clay figurines from Acambaro, Mexico. We have many photographs of modern day sightings including flyers like Pterodactyl and Pteronodon. In addition, modern day sightings of these flyers number in the thousands.

Many records from the middle ages up through the mid renaissance are published in newspaper reports and other documents representing what appear to be medium sized dinosaurs. Tribal people from all over the world have passed down stories and legends about dinosaur like creatures. In addition, we looked at representations of carvings, tapestry and etchings of dinosaur looking animal.

Sample from Earth Epochs

Most of the data we presented about dinosaurs is in the arena of DNA and carbon based C-14 tests on non-fossilized dinosaur bones to determine RC ages. More than 320 Eurasian and 65 American tests have been done returning dates of between 12 kya for a T-Rex up to 42 kya for Hadrosaurs and other Sauropods. All these tests have been performed in the last 5-6 years, and many more are scheduled to be done. The most hotly debated issue in scientific circles is trying to stretch biological elements (cartilage, collagen and hemoglobin elements) into a 65 million year time frame.

The strangest part of the whole process is that no Scientists are RC testing their own discoveries of non-fossilized dinosaur bones. They argue and debate the merits of biologic elements surviving for millions of years, yet NONE have taken the very easy, well known, scientifically accepted steps of RC (AMS C-14) testing the material. The tests that have been done clearly show that a wide variety of dinosaurs lived up to the Younger Dryas boundary, and that some pockets of survivors like triceratops lived well into the late Holocene.

It is a really simple question, Dr. Schweitzer. "Why not AMS RC test the so-called T-Rex hind limb? It is a straight forward 'falsification' step in the process. Why will Academia not test ANY dinosaur bones that show 'elastic collagen and hemoglobin elements'? It IS being done in other parts of the world.

The Giza Plateau Flood

In doing this research I realized that the age of the Giza Plateau could be generally dated based on the alluvial deposits on the plateau.

The Great Pyramid of Giza was not constructed by the dynastic Egyptians as evidenced by sediments found surrounding the base of the monument, as well as salt incrustations found within its interior, and watermarks on the stones halfway up its sides. Many seashells and fossils have been found around the base of the pyramid in some of the silt sediments rising to fourteen feet. Some of those sediments have been radiocarbon-dated to be nearly twelve thousand years old. Logically, only great quantities of continuous major sea flooding would produce this sediment. The dynastic Egyptians were not living in the area until several thousand years after the inundation, so they could never have recorded the event. This evidence alone suggests that the three main Giza pyramids are probably much older than current speculation suggests. They likely predate the 14,800 catastrophe, and maybe earlier cataclysms.

In support of this ancient flood scenario, legends and records tell of watermarks that were clearly visible on the limestone casing stones of the Great Pyramid before those stones were removed by the Arabs. These watermarks were halfway up the sides of the pyramid, or about 450 feet above present sea level. It is important to keep in mind that sea levels were 361' lower 13,000 years ago than they are today, making the inundation 254' up the Great Pyramid something around 810' in ocean rise, if the inundation happened about 12,800 years ago.

Sample from Earth Epochs

Further, when the Great Pyramid was first opened, incrustations of salt an inch thick were found inside. While much of this salt is known to be natural exudation from the stones of the pyramid, chemical analysis has shown that some of the salt has a mineral content consistent with salt from the sea. These salt incrustations, found at a height corresponding to the water level marks left on the exterior, are further evidence that at some time in the distant past the pyramid was submerged halfway up its height.

The Younger Dryas Event

A mass extinction of mega flora and fauna took place following the event, in which hundreds of species disappeared. "...Sometime during the 13th millennium in the northern part of Siberia, hundreds of thousands of animals, particularly Mammoths simply froze to death. Many were found upright, with grasses and other vegetation in their mouths and stomachs, demonstrating they were in the process of eating at the exact moment their death occurred. Some of the studies indicate that their skin still contained red blood corpuscles, which indicate they died by suffocation, probably by water, but possible gas. It is important to point out that woolly mammoths did not originally live in Arctic conditions, but rather inhabited a more temperate zone where wet boggy forests and grasslands prevailed.

Sample from Earth Epochs

In North America, the 40 million animals that died included seventy genera of large animals that went extinct, including all North American members of seven families and one complete order, the Proboscidea. The majority of those deaths occurred during a two thousand year period from 13,000 to 11,000 YBP. It is important to note that in all probability not all the genera populations collapsed or went extinct during or immediately following the actual event.

Many small pocket 'groups' managed to survive for some period of time where two thousand years seems to be the limit. To give some relative perspective to the extinction levels discussed here is to recognize that in the last 300,000 years less than 20 genera had gone extinct.

Sample from Earth Epochs

The cause-driver for the Y-D event was an impact of a very large celestial object about 10-16 miles in diameter, centered near Mt Sacajawea, Oregon and leaving an impact crater about 650 miles wide. From all appearances the object penetrated the Earth's crust continuing through its mantle and existing near the Taklimakan Desert in Western China, leaving a blowout crater of some 800 miles in width.

If the internal water table, (which is suspected of being three times the amount of all water on the surface) was penetrated, it is quite easy to understand how the 'fountains of the great deep' flooded the whole world to a level about 800' above the then current water table. That level is established by the discovery of the salt water line at over 255' up the side of the Great Pyramid when the casing stones were being removed by the Caliph of Cairo while gathering broken limestone for the rebuilding of the City of Cairo following the great earthquake of 1304 AD.

The Electrostatic Earth and the Gravity Question

This work started out as a single question about the dynamics of Newton's law of universal gravitation and Einstein's theory of general relativity. The question asks "How, and by what mechanisms do events and phenomenon occur that appear to contradict the fixed law of gravity and the assumptions of general relativity?" It eventually evolved into a derivative question, "Does phenomena exist and do anomalous events actually occur that contradict the law of universal gravitation? It seems likely that much of the phenomena does or did exist, and anomalous events actually do occur, so the question regarding the law of universal gravitation, by definition, has to be investigated in terms of whether gravitation has a hidden or unknown variable, or some other explanation that accommodates such phenomenon and events.

The question of variable, or 'attenuated' gravity arises when considering a 240,000 pound sauropod down to the moderate sized large mammals of the late Pleistocene, early Holocene that went collectively extinct following the end of the last ice age. How exactly, in our current gravitational environment did muscle power alone provide the torque necessary to raise a 40' neck and head weighing over 50 tons more than 60' in the air? How could leg muscles alone lift a quarter of a million pounds off the ground if the animal ever lay down to sleep or accidentally fell? We know for a fact those dinosaurs existed, and if muscle power alone can't account for their motive power and ultimate survival, what are we left with?

Sample from Earth Epochs

Looking at the diversity of giant flora and fauna in the geological column, and most particularly the size range and diversity of dinosaur and other flora and fauna populations requires an in-depth evaluation of Newton's law of universal gravitation. If any part of it, as the above issues suggest, has a variable or 'attenuation', then it isn't a "law", and probably isn't 'gravity' at all, but some other force entirely.

The upshot of the entire inquiry is to reject Gravity as a 'Law' and replace it with the Electrostatic Field, where the ES Field "Density" is the actual 'attenuation' or 'variable' portion of the effect. Much like rubbing a rubber balloon against a wool fabric, which will build up a static charge of a density equal to the amount of friction applied, which will then attract any object of an opposite polarity. The amount of attraction (or “G” force) is directly correlated to the ‘density’ or amount of the ES charge.

It is my contention that overunity can be achieved within the Electrostatic Field, at a greater level of quantum performance than even that of “scalar” waves in Electromagnetics, and that such “overunity” in the Electrostatic Field is the primary force previously defined as ‘G’ (Gravitational) force in conventional physics.
